

Advance Publicity for “Adventures in Morocco”

Morocco is a surprisingly diverse and welcoming nation. On the crossroads of history between Africa and Europe, Morocco has been influenced by Islam, Judaism and European colonialism. In April 2023, my wife and I went on an extensive tour that took us to Morocco’s cities and countryside. Along the way we visited ancient Roman ruins, ate delicious meals in ordinary Moroccan homes, trekked across the Sahara desert by camel and visited Kasbahs, Souks and Medinas from Casablanca to Marrakesh. This is the story of what we learned about the people and the ancient and modern sights of this fascinating nation.

Richard Jordan is a former President of the Etobicoke Historical Society and a former Toronto Star local history columnist. His feature articles on historical subjects have also appeared in the Saturday Star and the Sunday Star.

The photos below show some of our Adventures in Morocco – clockwise from top left: Richard and Maureen in the blue city of Chefchaouen, flowers in Fez, by camel across the Sahara, dining with a Berber family, shopping in the busy Medina of Marrakesh and a Moroccan breakfast featuring home-made yoghurt.

